For more than 130 years, National Geographic Explorers have ventured across continents and into remote cultures, down to the oceans' depths and up the highest mountains to further their understanding of the world. National Geographic Expeditions builds upon this legacy of exploration, inviting travelers to embrace their inner explorer and encounter the wonders of the world firsthand — up close and in depth — and be inspired by the experience.

When venturing with National Geographic Expeditions, travelers gain unparalleled access to people and places around the globe, experience natural and cultural marvels alongside renowned Experts and take part in meaningful travel that supports efforts to illuminate and protect our world. When travelers discover the world with National Geographic Expeditions, they also support the global community of National Geographic Explorers — scientists, conservationists, educators, storytellers, technologists and other changemakers who receive funding from the National Geographic Society. That is the National Geographic difference.

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC EXPEDITIONS

EXPEDITIONS — JOURNEYS AND FAMILY JOURNEYS

National Geographic Journeys, offered in collaboration with internationally acclaimed tour operator G Adventures, allow travelers to experience captivating cultures and habitats around the world. On these trips, travelers will enjoy the structure that comes with group travel with hands-on exploration and plenty of activity options. The design of National Geographic Journeys offers travelers more free time to explore with a tour leader at the helm. Groups are approximately 16 or fewer. National Geographic Journeys offer a wide range of trips on six continents, from wildlife safaris in Africa to cultural adventures in Asia to a grand tour of our own national parks.

THE NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC DIFFERENCE

Access: Closer Than You've Ever Imagined – National Geographic opens doors around the globe: The relationships with scientists, storytellers, museums, and active research sites allow special access to places and people, including National Geographic grantees, whose field sites are visited wherever possible. Traveling with National Geographic Expeditions, travelers go behind the scenes to get a close-up view of work that's helping illuminate and protect the world's cultural and natural treasures.

Knowledge: Let Our Experts Guide You – Travelers gain knowledge when exploring the world with National Geographic—whether they are face-to-face with an elephant in the Serengeti, listening to a wildlife biologist explain its every move, or gazing up at prehistoric cave paintings with a paleontologist in France. From the scientists, photographers, and explorers who lead the trips to the local guides and experts met in the field, travelers will be surrounded by people who are steeped in knowledge and insights about the places visited. And they're passionate about sharing that knowledge.

Give Back: When You Travel With Us, You Make a Difference – When people travel with National Geographic Expeditions, they support the community of National Geographic Explorers who work to preserve, protect, and advance our understanding of the planet and its people. Every year, the Society awards more than 575 grants to scientists, educators, innovators, and storytellers around the world.*

*These funds support the Society's conservation, exploration, research, and education projects around the globe. To learn more, visit natgeo.com/info.

A LEGACY OF EXPLORATION

- Launched in 1999, National Geographic Expeditions operates hundreds of trips each year, spanning all seven continents and more than 80 destinations.
- National Geographic Expeditions was founded on the same belief in the importance of exploration that distinguishes the National Geographic Society's 130-plus-year history.

FULFILLING CURIOSITY

National Geographic Expeditions are designed to meet travelers' broad range of interests – from photography and history to hiking and kayaking — with expeditions by land, ship, train, and private jet. Venturing with National Geographic Expeditions creates boundless opportunities to become surrounded by natural wonders and exotic wildlife, explore celebrated archaeological sites, learn about diverse cultures and share in local traditions. And whenever possible, expeditions include rare access to experiences hosted by National Geographic Explorers. With more than 150 itineraries available, the expansive travel portfolio offers experiences for a variety of ages and travel parties, including families and independent travelers.
